FOREIGN-EXCHANGE SERVICE

1. GENERAL

1.01 Foreign-exchange service is primary exchange service furnished from an exchange which does not normally serve the area in which the customer to such service is located. It is provided at the discretion of the Company and subject to the availability of suitable facilities and to the requirements of exchange service and message toll telephone service.

1.02 Foreign-exchange service is furnished with individual line and P.B.X. service, except as otherwise specified in this Tariff.

1.03 Foreign-exchange service is furnished in accordance with the methods that best suit plant and operating requirements of the Company. When the Company has to install special equipment or incur any unusual expense in order to furnish the service, it may be an additional charge based on the equipment installed or other expense incurred; it may also specify an initial service period in excess of that otherwise applicable, in accordance with N80-20.01.

1.04 When a P.B.X. system or push-button telephone system or key equipment is connected with both normal and foreign exchanges, the rate for P.B.X. additional lines that have access to both exchanges is the higher of the rates applicable in those exchanges.

1.05 Extra listings are provided without additional charge as follows:

(a) When the customer has service from each exchange: one listing in the alphabetical list of the foreign exchange and one in that of the normal exchange.

(b) When the customer has service from the foreign exchange only: one listing in the alphabetical list of the normal exchange.

(c) Such listings contain a suitable reference to the service furnished from the other exchange.

1.06 Service charges and the local-service area of telephones connected for foreign-exchange service are those of the foreign exchange.

1.07 The channel measurement and rate distance for the inter-exchange part of each central-office line or trunk line are specified as follows:
Channel measurement ..... See N690-2.01(a)
Rate distance ..... See N690-2.01(b)

1.08 The monthly charge is that specified in N690-3.01.In addition,extra additional exchange distance charges for the normal exchange apply where appropriate.
